A Wonderful Remedy.

"Seven Barks" was discovered and formulated thirty-three years ago by the once celebrated physician and chemist, Dr. Franz Gauswein, of Weisbaden, Germany. The curative properties of "Seven Barks" are extracted from the bark of a specially grown species of the Hydrangea plant—the bark of which, as botanists will tell you, grows in seven layers, each of different color and each possessing a distinctive medicinal value. It is the only plant known from which is extracted Providence-given elements, which in combination produce a single panacea that is a sovereign remedy for most all ailments and diseases of the Lungs, Stomach, Bowels, Liver, Kidneys and Nerves. It is sold by over twenty thousand druggists in this United States alone, on a positive guarantee of absolute satisfaction or get your money back. Mrs. Mary Kittle, Kingville, W. Va., says: "I have been using 'Seven Barks' for Heart Trouble, Dyspepsia and Indigestion and find it does me more good than anything I can get."

Mrs. E. L. Kearney, of Cleveland, Miss., writes:—"Seven Barks" has been a standby in my family for many years. Mr. Conrad Stagle, Burrows, Ind., says: "For a long time I was in a bad fix with my back and kidneys and other troubles. I tried many doctors and various medicines and got no relief, but since I have been taking 'Seven Barks' I feel like a different man."

One thing we must not forget to say, "Seven Barks" is not, and never was intended to be, a lightning remedy. It doesn't rush things. It works slowly and thoroughly. But it will do its duty. Follow the directions and "Seven Barks" will justify your confidence in it.

BONES FOUND IN ASHES

Sensational Discovery in the Lost Babe Case.

EXPERT TO DECIDE ORIGIN

Grotesque Discovery in Mystery of Missing New Hampshire Babe Lends New and Tragical Aspect to the Strange Case.

Danbury, N. H., May 6.—A dozen pieces of what is evidently human bone and a portion of a half burned swallow's nest furnished a sensation in the Elwin Braley disappearance case yesterday.

They were discovered among a lot of wood ashes in the ash box used in the Braley domicile and kept in an out-building. If the fragments of bone can be shown to have come from a human body the Braley mystery will be partially solved; if not, the affair is as problematical as ever.

The pieces were discovered by Justice of the Peace and Constable John E. Smith of Grafton. Dr. Lee V. Knapp was shown the fragments and while declining to express a positive opinion, stated that he felt sure one of the pieces, about an inch in length, was a part of the ulna, the forearm, and it is of the size which would be expected in a child of the age and state of development of Elwin Braley. He suggested that the nature of the fragments might be definitely fixed by an expert in Concord, to whom the bones will be exhibited.

The ash box has been looked into probably 100 times since the case first attracted public attention a week ago Thursday, but no one thought of making a careful examination of its contents until Constable Smith appeared on the scene yesterday morning. His search had continued only a few minutes when he found one piece of bone, and then he called Selectmen Howe and Gifford and asked them to help him make a complete examination with his sieve.

The fragments might have belonged to some small animal or they might have helped to form a human skeleton. The latter seems very probable, in view of the statement of Dr. Knapp, who is the leading practitioner in this section. The discovery of the portion of a swallow's nest means that a chimney has been cleaned out within a few days, and the nest thrown out with the soot and ashes.

The discovery of this half burned nest means, if it means anything, that a fire was started in the Braley farm chimney, which had not been used for some time. The nest was burned from its position and fell to the bottom of the chimney. Shortly afterward the aperture was cleaned out.

Why this fire was started under that particular chimney and why there was a subsequent cleaning out of the place with its accumulation of ashes, etc., cannot be told now, but the subject opens up a wide range of conjecture which will be particularly interesting and important if the Concord expert is able to identify the fragments as human bones.

From the standpoint of a layman, the bones give every evidence of having come from a small human arm, but the fragments are too small to enable any person to tell definitely. The largest one is not over 1 1/2 inches in length and the smaller ones are only from one-fourth to one-half an inch long. No traces of metal or buttons or shreds of clothing was found in the ashes, only these dozen fragments which may or may not prove to be of the utmost importance in reaching a solution of the remarkable case.

There was other excitement about the scene of the disappearance yesterday and it affords the only humorous feature of this remarkable case. The clairvoyant came to town and she "fell down." As a far-seeing prophetess, the country people for miles about had regarded the trance medium as a wonder, and over 100 gathered about the Braley establishment in order to be present when the denouement was made and the words of wisdom dropped which would tell to the world what had become of little Elwin Braley.

First the clairvoyant wanted to see Desolite pond, a sheet of water about an acre in extent, and was accompanied to the pond by her husband and A. F. Hoyt, chairman of the Grafton board of selectmen. She looked at the pond, she looked at the men accompanying her, and then she looked wise. "I see nothing, nothing, nothing, but the woman," she announced. "I must go to this woman at once, for there is my control, and then the power will be given me," she continued melodramatically, "but first let us have dinner."

The mediums appetite was satisfied at a farmhouse on the road to the Braley residence, and then the clairvoyant had a long conversation with the mother of the missing boy but, at its conclusion she did not volunteer any information, announcing that she must go home and think more.

The Canon's Protest.

During a rendering of Mendelssohn's oratorio "St. Paul" at Swindon, the vicar, Canon Estcourt, a member of the audience, rose from his seat, after some applause, and appealed on sacred grounds for a reservation of all demonstrations of approval until the end of the performance. Little heed was taken of the request, and the canon soon afterwards left the hall.—London Chronicle.
